Claims 11-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claims contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventors, at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. It is not seen or understood how the circuit component can be properly placed onto a circuit substrate by a gripper that will place the component by means of ... turning the gripper towards the surface of the circuit substrate a first time It cannot be understood how the circuit component will be properly placed onto the circuit substrate.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 11-21, assuming that the disclosure is enabling, are further rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Applicants recite ...removing the gripper towards of the circuit substrate a first time to a target distance from the surface at which adhesive is applied between the circuit component and the circuit substrate, releasing the circuit component and removing the gripper from the circuit component, turning the gripper around an axis perpendicular to the surface of the circuit substrate..., and moving the gripper to the target distance a second time and removing the gripper. There are at least 3 issues with respect to clarity and vagueness here. What do Applicants mean by reciting the language... turning the gripper around an axis perpendicular to the surface of the circuit substrate? This is not clearly defined since the axis can be perpendicular to the component's lengthwise measurement. At any rate this language is held not to properly or clearly define Applicants' invention. Moreover what do Applicants intend or mean when they recite that they move the gripper for a second time to the target distance. The Examiner is confused as to what this means. After the component is released why do Applicants perform the 2nd gripper moving step. It seems to have been redundant. Moreover what do applicants intend by the language "target distance" in their claims? Is a target distance some length that is an optimum distance? From where or what point is this distance reckoned? What is a preferred "target distance"? As further applied to claim 13 it is held that the recital of ...moving the gripper to a detected local coordinate. ... is abstruse, vague and indefinite. It is requested that Applicants provide the Examiner the portions of the Specification that teaches where or how to determine where the ... detected local coordinate... is located.
